Master of Science in Speech and Language Pathology

Master of Science in Speech and Language Pathology

Overview

Program Benefits of Albizu University

The Master of Science in Speech and Language Pathology (MS-SLP) program at Albizu University, prepares students to become skilled professionals capable of addressing speech, language, cognitive-linguistic, and swallowing disorders in both children and adults. Graduates are equipped to provide clinical services and serve as consultants and clinical supervisors in various settings.

The program integrates therapeutic training and practical experience, focusing on diverse populations, including those with autism, ADHD, aphasia, and other developmental and neurogenic conditions. It promotes an inclusive, client-centered approach to address various communication styles and neurological profiles.

Students gain hands-on experience through external practicum placements and supervised training at the Albizu Speech and Language Clinic. With classes on Fridays and Saturdays, the program offers flexibility for working professionals while clinical practicums occur on weekdays.
